Demonstration archive using sample family data

Executive summary

This archive documents the lineage of Arjun Rajesh Malhotra, tracing the family's roots from the village of Nissing in Haryana, India, through their settlement in Karnal, and their eventual migration to Birmingham, England. The records confirm a continuous paternal line of eight named family members across seven generational links, reaching Harnarayan Malhotra as the earliest named ancestor. The family belongs to the Bharadwaj Gotra and the Punjabi Khatri community, traditionally engaged in the grain and cloth trade.

I have examined the same old lineage-related page. In this entry, the name of Lala Girdhari Lal Malhotra is recorded. According to the record, his wife's name is Radha Devi. His father's name is written as Kanhaiya Lal Malhotra and his grandfather's name as Harnarayan Malhotra. The family's place of origin is Village Nissing, District Karnal, Haryana. The family's Gotra is Bhardwaj and the community is recorded as Punjabi Khatri. In the family's traditional occupation, there is mention of trade in grain, ghee, and cloth. On this page, the name of Diwan Chand Malhotra is recorded as his son. In the further branches of the lineage, the names of Harbans Lal Malhotra, Mohan Lal Malhotra, Rajesh Kumar Malhotra, and Arjun Rajesh Malhotra are found connected. Thus, this page confirms that Lala Girdhari Lal Malhotra is the father of Diwan Chand Malhotra. On this page, the names of Kanhaiya Lal Malhotra and Harnarayan Malhotra are recorded as even older generations. These old names have been preserved in the record based on family memory and lineage tradition. Thank you.

A note on register accuracy and interpretation

Traditional family-register entries often record more than one type of information at the same time. When a family member visits a register priest to update the family record, the priest may record not only the main event being reported, but also the names of people who were present, travelling with the family, helping with the visit, or otherwise connected to the update. For this reason, a register entry may include additional names that are not direct ancestors or immediate family members.

These registers are handwritten, often in older local styles, and may include priest shorthand, abbreviated names, regional spellings, and words affected by ageing paper, ink, image quality, or spoken pronunciation. Some names and places may also appear differently when transliterated into English.

Indian Archive uses AI-assisted transcription and translation, followed by human quality review, to produce the clearest reading we can from the available evidence. Where text is unclear, uncertain, or only partly legible, we aim to preserve that uncertainty rather than guess. Despite this review process, traditional register evidence can still contain ambiguity, and occasional transcription or translation errors are possible.

This report should therefore be read as a reviewed heritage archive based on the evidence available at the time of research. It is intended to help preserve and explain your family record, not to replace the original register or serve as legal proof of identity, inheritance, caste, nationality, or relationship.

Closing note

Thank you for entrusting Indian Archive with your family research. This report reflects the evidence our team was able to confirm against traditional Indian register keepers. Additional evidence may be uncovered in future visits — do reach out if you would like to extend this work.

Any spelling of ancestor names, villages or dates in this report follows what appears in the reviewed register or spoken evidence. Where our team could not confirm a detail against reviewed evidence, it is either marked "Customer intake" or omitted.
